ENGLISH MAJOR REQUIREMENTS (38 credit hours)

English study is tremendously rewarding and has much to offer both the practical and the inquiring student because of its focus on the essential human endeavors of reading, critical thinking and interpretation, and writing. English study enhances aesthetic perception and engages us vicariously through literature with the perennial themes and questions of the human condition with the aim of understanding our own lives in today's world. Students study literary and other texts in English in generic, aesthetic, historical, religious, and other contexts, including the theoretical and interdisciplinary contexts the faculty bring to the courses they teach.

Many opportunities exist for the English major in careers such as teaching, professional and technical writing, newspaper work, editing, personnel work, and government service. The English major is also excellent training for any career that requires perceptive reading, orderly and clear thinking, and persuasive and graceful expression. It is useful as an undergraduate major for careers in law, medicine, education, business, library work, organizational behavior, and publishing and editing. Some graduates work in journalism, advertising, script writing, and public information. Local, state, and federal government agencies offer career possibilities, as do business and industry. Students would be wise to combine the English major with a minor in a any field that would help prepare them for the job market.
