POLITICS
MAJOR REQUIREMENTS
(29-30 credit hours)

The study of politics, broadly understood, is the study of power in human societies: how it is established, how it changes, and how it may be evaluated. On the one hand, political science attempts to understand—to explain and to interpret—phenomena such as political upheaval and stability, democracy and dictatorship, economic prosperity and deprivation. On the other hand, the study of politics also seeks to find possible justifications for political authority, and to evaluate the ends for which political power is used and the means through which it is exercised. In short, the study of politics is concerned not only with the way the social world is, but also how it might be improved.

The politics major and minor at Southern Virginia University are designed to be extensions of the core liberal arts curriculum. For this reason, the politics program is intended not only for those who want to pursue a political or legal vocation; the program aims to provide not job-specific training but rather the knowledge and intellectual skills necessary for the responsible exercise of civic freedom. As part of a liberal arts education, however, the politics program trains students in the skills of thinking and expression which are valuable in a wide range of occupations. In the politics program, students will have the opportunity to think about political concepts such as justice, authority and freedom with thinkers from Plato and Aristotle to Hobbes and Kant; to understand classic and contemporary views of the American democratic project; and to grapple with contemporary issues in world politics such as the prospects for global democratization, the challenges of economic development, and the causes and consequence of war and political violence.
